1. INTRODUCTION

The European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations (HEUNI) functions under the auspices of the Finnish Ministry of Justice as an independent research and policy-making institute. HEUNI was established in 1981 with an agreement between Finland and the United Nations. The institute currently has 8 staff members. The main budgetary responsibility for HEUNI lies with the Government of Finland but some 30% of the institute's turnover is covered through the participation in externally funded projects, in particular grants funded by the European Commission.

HEUNI's work is guided by its founding statutes, which state that HEUNI: organises seminars for policy-makers, administrators, experts and researchers; collects, provides, publishes and disseminates information; conducts research; and holds conferences and meetings. Today HEUNI's work is increasingly focusing on conducting research, on publishing the findings in easily accessible formats, disseminating the findings to relevant stakeholders, and advocating and participating in policy-making related to the institute's areas of focus. HEUNI's menu of services include the development of research methodologies, the collection and analysis of various forms of data, the development of indicators, measures, practical tools and guidelines, and the provision of training. HEUNI's mandate of work covers all of Europe but HEUNI aims to transfer European practices and knowledge also beyond this geographic region.

HEUNI selects and develops its areas of focus independently but is guided by the priorities of the United Nations. HEUNI is the European regional institute in the United Nations Criminal Justice and Crime Prevention programme network (PNI). HEUNI's affiliation with the United Nations means that HEUNI collaborates with other members of this network, closely follows the work of the UN vis-à-vis the prevention of crime and crime control within the framework of criminal justice and supports the UN in the implementation of its priorities, in particular the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development and the Sustainable Development Goals.

The European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations (HEUNI) is approaching its 40th anniversary. HEUNI was established at a time when there was a strong divide within Europe, when access to information on crime prevention, crime control and criminology was limited, and when the work of the UN with regard to criminal justice and crime prevention was still new and the capacity limited. HEUNI was established as a regional institute to advance the work of the United Nations in the prevention of crime and crime control within Europe, to bridge the gap between the different countries of Europe, and to share information. In nearly forty years, much has changed. The geopolitical realities have shifted and there has been a revolution in access to information. Globalization coupled with a change in societal values and norms have also altered the forms of crime and criminality in Europe and beyond. There has been increased attention to forms of organized crime, as well as human trafficking and corruption, as exemplified by international treaties focused on addressing these phenomena. The effects of crime and violence on gender, in particular gender-based violence, has also received recognition through international agreements and also through regional and national action. The expansion of the European Union with its free movement of goods and services has increased movement within Europe, while at the same time, there has been an increase in migration from outside of Europe. While both HEUNI's operational environment and the challenges of crime have changed significantly, the original functions of HEUNI still remain notably relevant: to collect and share relevant information, to conduct research, and to organize meetings and seminars for policy-makers, experts and researchers.
This strategy updates, revises and strengthens HEUNI’s operations to suit the demands of the 21st century. This is a strategy in particular for organizational capacity-building. The strategy aims to strengthen HEUNI’s ways of work so as to clarify our goals, make us better equipped to adapt to future changes in the operational environment, and to make HEUNI’s approach more efficient and innovative so that we can increasingly produce cutting edge results.

This strategy is informed by an internal assessment – the Common Assessment Framework CAF – carried out by HEUNI staff, combined with internal discussions within HEUNI, consultations with the HEUNI Advisory Board, external consultations with selected counterparts, a stakeholder survey, and an analysis of the external operational environment. The stakeholder analysis has been used to validate the choices made in the strategy.

This strategy outlines HEUNI’s purpose, mission and vision, our values, a set of core guiding principles, as well as goals for the selected six areas of work for the period 2020-2023.

In this strategy, we are guided by the ethos of HEUNI’s founder, professor Inkeri Anttila, who emphasized respect for human values and rational decision-making in the prevention of crime within the framework of criminal justice. We are also inspired by her poignant point that criminologists should not sit in their chambers, thinking wise thoughts, but should instead actively engage in societal discussion for the improvement of policies and practices.
We strive towards the achievement of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular goals 5 (gender equality), 8 (decent work) and 16 (peace and justice):

- Goal 5: We work in particular towards the elimination of violence against women and girls as well as trafficking (goal 5.2) and the elimination of harmful practices, such as forced marriage (goal 5.3).
- Goal 8: We work in particular towards the eradication of forced labour and trafficking (goal 8.7) and the promotion of access to rights for migrant workers (goal 8.8).
- Goal 16: We work in particular towards reducing violence (goals 16.1) as well as violence against children, including child trafficking (goal 16.2), the promotion of the rule of law (goal 16.3), addressing illicit financial flows and corruption (goals 16.4 and 16.5), and strengthening access to justice and procedural justice (goals 16.7 and 16.A).

In addition, our work supports goals 10 to reduce inequality and discrimination and goal 17 to support partnerships for the implementation of the SDGs.
3. THE HEUNI STRATEGY 2020-2023 IN A NUTSHELL

Purpose
The fundamental reason for our organization's existence

HEUNI aims at a fair and just world by advancing humane and rational criminal justice policies and systems in the European region, in line with the Sustainable Development Goals.

Mission
The compelling goal we are striving to achieve

HEUNI is a bold front-runner in creating and sharing uncompromised knowledge on the prevention of crime within the framework of criminal justice. We engage policymakers, practitioners and researchers in frank discussions to tackle current problems. We develop innovative and action-oriented solutions to advance the rights of those affected by crime.

Vision
Our aspiration for what we want to be in the future.

HEUNI carries out ground-breaking research that influences policies concerning the prevention of crime and crime control nationally, in Europe and beyond, thus providing a contribution towards the achievement of peace, justice and strong institutions in line with the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

6. BRIEF OVERVIEW OF THE EXTERNAL OPERATING ENVIRONMENT

In the coming years, the external environment in which HEUNI operates is likely to face a range of changes, developments and challenges. The future is notably difficult to predict. However, some evident changes – or megatrends – are well-known and likely to affect HEUNI’s operating environment in the long-term. The megatrends may not only affect the way societies and organizations work, but also the forms and nature of crime and how they affect people and society in the future. In the short-term the effects may not be so drastic. The following short selection of trends is not all-inclusive, but they may bring with them both positive and negative changes.¹

Climate change is a reality which will affect all areas of life on the planet. In terms of crime challenges, increased climate migration may lead to increased smuggling, trafficking, extremism and exploitation of vulnerable populations. Migration is likely to increase not only as a result of climate change, but also due to rising inequalities between the global South and the global North. This may increase societal tension and forms of hate crime. Climate change is also likely to lead to crimes against the environment. At the same time, there will be positive developments as migration can replace dwindling populations e.g. in Europe and create more diverse societies. In the area of law, there is likely to be an expansion of legal rights granted to the environment, the climate, and also animals. In our work, we will pay specific attention to vulnerable groups and their access to justice, including female migrants and victims of trafficking. We will also develop new areas of research that incorporate the relationships between global threats, e.g. in the form of environmental corporate crime.

Changes in democracy, the international order as well as norms and values may be two-fold. On the one hand, there is a risk of increased conflict, nationalism and populism, which may lead challenges to the universalist approach to international law, human rights, the role of law, the role and significance of multilateralism and threats to the rights of women, girls and minorities, as well as increased polarization. Violent conflicts combined with decreasing respect for democratic ideals, increases in corruption and technological advancements may facilitate the increase in organized crime and public sector mismanagement. On the other hand, there has been a documented decrease in absolute poverty, increase in gender equality and increased recognition of rights for minorities. Modern technologies are increasing citizens’ possibility to participate in societal dialogue and young people are becoming more liberal and individualistic also in traditional societies. This in turn, may increase the spread of democratic ideas and ideals and strengthen democracy in different parts of the world. We will work to support the upholding of democratic institutions and prevent corruption as well as forms of serious crime.

Changes in the nature of work and digitalization as well as development of artificial intelligence will affect the way organizations and societies function. Lifelong learning and adaptation to technological advancements will be a basic requirement at work. At the same time, forms of employment will change, with increased employment insecurity and flexibility as a result. This may in particular affect marginalized and disadvantaged populations and may lead to increased exploitation of labour. The development of artificial intelligence, on the other hand, will lead to the digitalization of many current forms of work. Artificial intelligence may also lead to yet unknown forms of cybercrime. The internet of things and blockchain is likely to affect our future both in positive and negative terms. In our work, we will address the rights of disadvantageous workers to prevent exploitation, and work with both businesses and governments to address economic crimes.

7. CROSS-CUTTING PRINCIPLES FOR OUR WORK

Professionalism

All HEUNI’s processes take into consideration that HEUNI is an organisation that respects and fosters professionalism, and that strives for structured yet human-centered project management and routines, taking into account the wellbeing of staff.

Sustainable funding

With regard to external funding, we prioritise grants and own projects rather than tenders. Our goal is one new major project every year.

Continuous learning

We emphasize continuous learning and development. Boldness means that we boldly take on new working methods and are ready to challenge old perceptions and adopt new ways of thinking.

Intersectionality

Our research always takes into consideration gender, age, and various positions of vulnerability. We are aware of our privileged position when engaging with vulnerable or marginalized groups.

Climate change awareness

We acknowledge that climate change is a reality, which will affect also our work and organization. We take this reality into consideration in the following ways:

- Travel: International and national travel is an integral part of HEUNI’s work. We will take steps to mitigate the impact of air travel, including through online conferencing, using alternative means of transport, lower emission flights, and through offsetting.
- Energy and housing: We will assess our energy consumption and make amendments to reduce it.
- Programming: We will take into consideration the potential effects of climate change on the substantive topics we engage in.

Sustainability

In our work, we strive towards social and environmental sustainability. We purchase sustainably produced goods and services, whenever possible, and we pay our interns a fair wage.
